Dear Brother Chalk,

Parade Magazine for May 8, 1966 had an article by Will Ousler on the "God-is-Dead" controversy. He showed, as we have been observing, that people are being motivated to study and to think as a result of this controversy. What they meant for evil God has meant for good, by bringing increased interest in His will.

Cordially in Christ,

James D. Bales

Dear John Allen,

I haven't read it yet, and the second volume is not yet out, but J. D. Thomas' book, Fact and Faith looks like it has some good material in it.

Cordially yours,

James D. Bales

Dear John Allen,

Return to me
I am enclosing some possible charts or suggestions for charts that you might use if you do some TV programs. Some of these were suggested by a student. As you will note, you could have a chart listing the pertinent information about his three main prophets--Blake, Hegel and Nietzsche--and their beliefs.

The others have to do with some dialectics. In some cases I am showing how you can just make an intellectual toy out of this thing if you want to. Others are representations of his own position. Please return these to me when you are through with them. I just thought it might be that they would give you some ideas which you could use on your television program.

Cordially in Christ,

James D. Bales
